

Reapplication Issues for National Service Personnel

It is rather common for my students to ask me these questions,

1) If I regret my choice of courses during my national services, can I reapply to all 3 courses?

2) I didn't get my first choice in my first application; can I try again next year?

The following links contains the answer to the aforementioned questions. However, do consider carefully about your choices. It is not always true that courses that are difficult to get into are good courses or have better career prospects. Doing well in the course you choose is still the most essential. Consider your strengths, interests and career choices to make the best decision.

Useful Links and Answers

1)NUS:

http://www.askadmissions.nus.edu.sg/app/answers/detail/a_id/49/session/L2F2LzEvdGltZS8xMjk2NDExMTE5L3NpZC9EdE5ZR25saw%3D%3D

2)NTU (well, I cant find the FAQ section but here is what I have got from their site)

Full-Time National Servicemen (NSF) with places already reserved in NTU and who wish to submit new applications may do so by applying under the respective groups.

3) SMU (I cant find it either!)

Well I think it is definitely possible. If your results are good, all university will be more than willing to take you in. Reapplication should not be an issue.

All the best in your application!!